

typedef

typedef is used to make a long definition into a shorter alias definition. For example:

```
struct DataType
{
    int info;
    int key;
};

typedef apvector<DataType> List;

int LinearSearch(const List & x, int key)
```

Instead of having to place apvector<DataType> everywhere, you now only have to put List.